Background Information

As unemployment is expected to rise, increased funding has been allocated to the Swedish public Employment Service (Arbetsförmedlingen) and labour market policy programmes. The period during which a person may have a subsidised form of employment is extended by an additional year for those who already have such jobs. Additionally, the maximum time for support for starting a business is extended from six to twelve months. Municipalities will receive grants for more summer jobs for young people and funding for 'green jobs'.
