Background information

The Ministry of Economics, Labour and Housing Baden-Württemberg has launched an emergency aid program: Commercial companies, social enterprises and members of the liberal professions who are in an existentially threatening economic situation as a result of the Corona pandemic and who suffer massive liquidity bottlenecks will receive a one-off, non-repayable grant.

The measures are legally implemented via the 'Ordinance of the state government about infection control measures against the spread of the SARS-Cov-2 virus (Corona Regulation - CoronaVO, see sources), effective as of 17 March 2020.

Content of measure

The Ministry of Economics, Labour and Housing Baden-Württemberg has launched an emergency aid program for micro- and small companies, such as commercial companies, social enterprises and members of the liberal professions who are in an existentially threatening economic situation as a result of the Corona pandemic and who suffer massive liquidity bottlenecks will receive a one-off, non-repayable grant.

The emergency aid package stipulates that regional companies can apply for 9,000 euros (companies with up to 5 employees), 15,000 euros (up to 10 employees) or up to 30,000 euros (for up to 50 employees) of emergency aid assistance. All companies that were not in financial difficulties before the end of 2019 can apply for the grants. The regional emergency aid programme is a temporary measure to implement the one-off payments. However, the documents do not speak of a definite deadline. End of 2020 has been added as a time limit, as all cases should be dealt with by the end of the year.
