Background information

In accordance with chapter 6 of the Employment Contract Act (2001/55) and chapter 7 of the Seafarers' Employment Contracts Act (756/2011), employees shall offer re-employment to former employers that have been dismissed due to financial and production-related reason in case the employer needs to hire to positions similar to those the dismissed employee had. This applies to all permanent contracts that have been terminated due to financial and production-related reasons within the past 4 or 6 months, depending on length of the contract. This obligation seeks to protect employees from unemployment.

This obligation has been temporarily extended to nine months in order to protect employees affected by the COVID-19 outbreak.

Content of measure

This measure applies to all cases of dismissals made due to financial and production-related reasons that have taken place during a time when the temporary provisions were in force. This applies to all employments, regardless of their duration.

Not applicable to the following employers: the State, municipalities, KELA, Åland Government, Evangelical

Lutheran Church or Orthodox Church. These employers follow four or six months re-employment obligation.

This measure does not directly involve financial support but it seeks to protect employees who have been dismissed due to the effects of the COVID-19 pandemic from long-term unemployment and facilitate their return to the labour market when the situation normalises.
