Background Information

Residents who have lost their jobs or at least a third of their usual income and have housing (residential) or consumer loans can ask the lender to defer the repayment installments for three months. This provision is included in new amendments to the laws regulating consumer and housing credit-granting activities, i.e. the Law adding Article 18-1 to Law No. XI-1253 of the Republic of Lithuania on Consumer Credit and the Law amending Article 22 of Law No. XII-2769 of the Republic of Lithuania on Real Estate Related Credit. The aim is to help residents experiencing financial difficulties as a result of the declared quarantine.

Content of measure

Residents who have lost their jobs or at least a third of their usual income and have housing or consumer loans can ask the lender to defer the repayment installments for three months. Until now, the right to defer credit repayments was available only for mortgage borrowers (housing credit holders) (in the case of loss of employment, death of a spouse, divorce or incapacity for work), whereas for those with consumer loans the possibility of deferral of credit repayments has not been provided for under the law. During the credit deferral period, borrowers will only have to pay credit interest.
