Background information

A special sickness benefit for persons in obligatory quarantine due to the Covid-19 was introduced by the amendment of the Act No. 461/2003 Coll. on Social insurance. The purpose of this measure is to help persons to overcome their lower income during quarantine. A further goal is to contain the costs for employers which might have to pay wage compensation to the employees on a sick leave for not quarantine-related reasons.

Content of measure

In case of obligatory quarantine, the benefit is paid by the Social Insurance Agency from the first day of quarantine at the level of 55% of gross wage (approx. 70% of net wage).

The person with diagnosed Covid-19 contacts his or her physician by phone or email. The physician sends the form to the Social Insurance Agency. Sick person also must inform his or her employer about the quarantine. There have been differences from the regular sickness benefit applied in other reasons than Covid-19. In these other cases, the first ten days of sick leave are paid by the employer as a wage compensation (25% of gross wage during first three days and 55% of gross wage from the fourth to the 10th day). The sickness benefit is paid by the Social Insurance Agency from the 11th day of the sickness (55% of gross wage).

Not all persons in obligatory quarantine with Covid-19 are eligible for this benefit. They have to have paid sickness benefit insurance at least 270 days in the course of two years before the sickness - same as in other cases.
